COACH CANDIDATE REPORT

THEODOROS DEDES

36 | Greece| Former manager of 1899 Hoffenheim

Preferred formation : 4-4-2

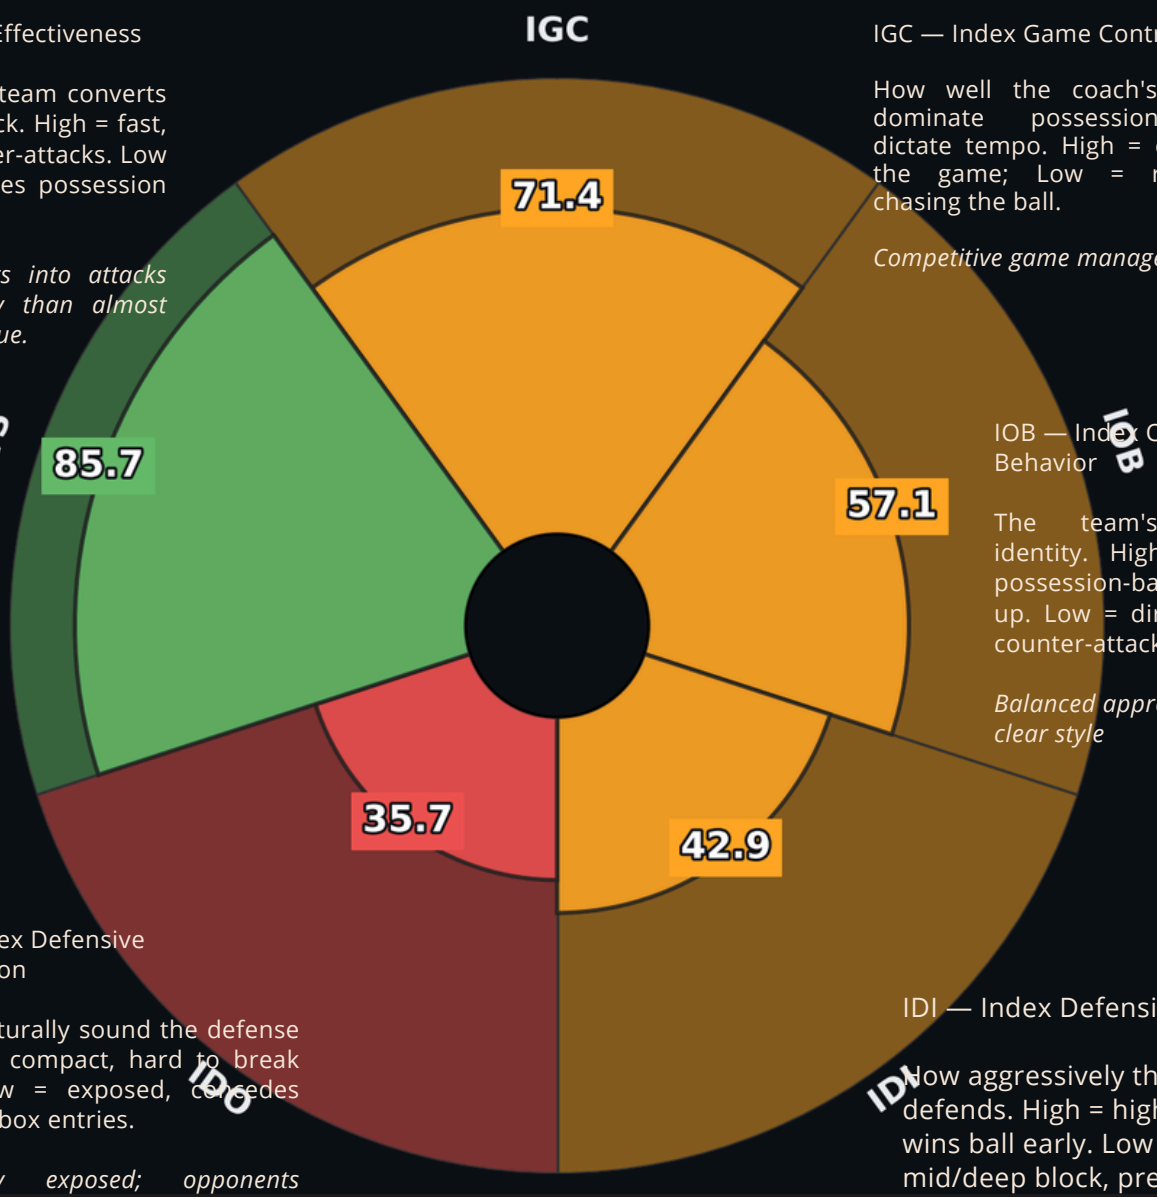
A promotion specialist with two Frauen-Bundesliga promotions to his name at Meppen, Dedes is a transition-first coach whose counter-attacking system can genuinely unlock dangerous moments (ITS 85.7). But his profile exposes a critical flaw: an IDO of 35.7 that places him in the bottom third of the league for defensive organization — the exact same weakness already bleeding Union Berlin points every week.

Theodoros Dedes — League Percentiles

ITS — Transition Effectiveness

How lethally the team converts defense into attack. High = fast, dangerous counter-attacks. Low = cautious, secures possession first

Converts turnovers into attacks more dangerously than almost anyone in the league.



IGC — Index Game Control

How well the coach's teams dominate possession and dictate tempo. High = controls the game; Low = reactive, chasing the ball.

Competitive game management

IOB — Index Offensive Behavior

The team's attacking identity. High = patient, possession-based build-up. Low = direct, vertical, counter-attacking.

Balanced approach, no clear style

IDO — Index Defensive Organization

How structurally sound the defense is. High = compact, hard to break down. Low = exposed, concedes shots and box entries.

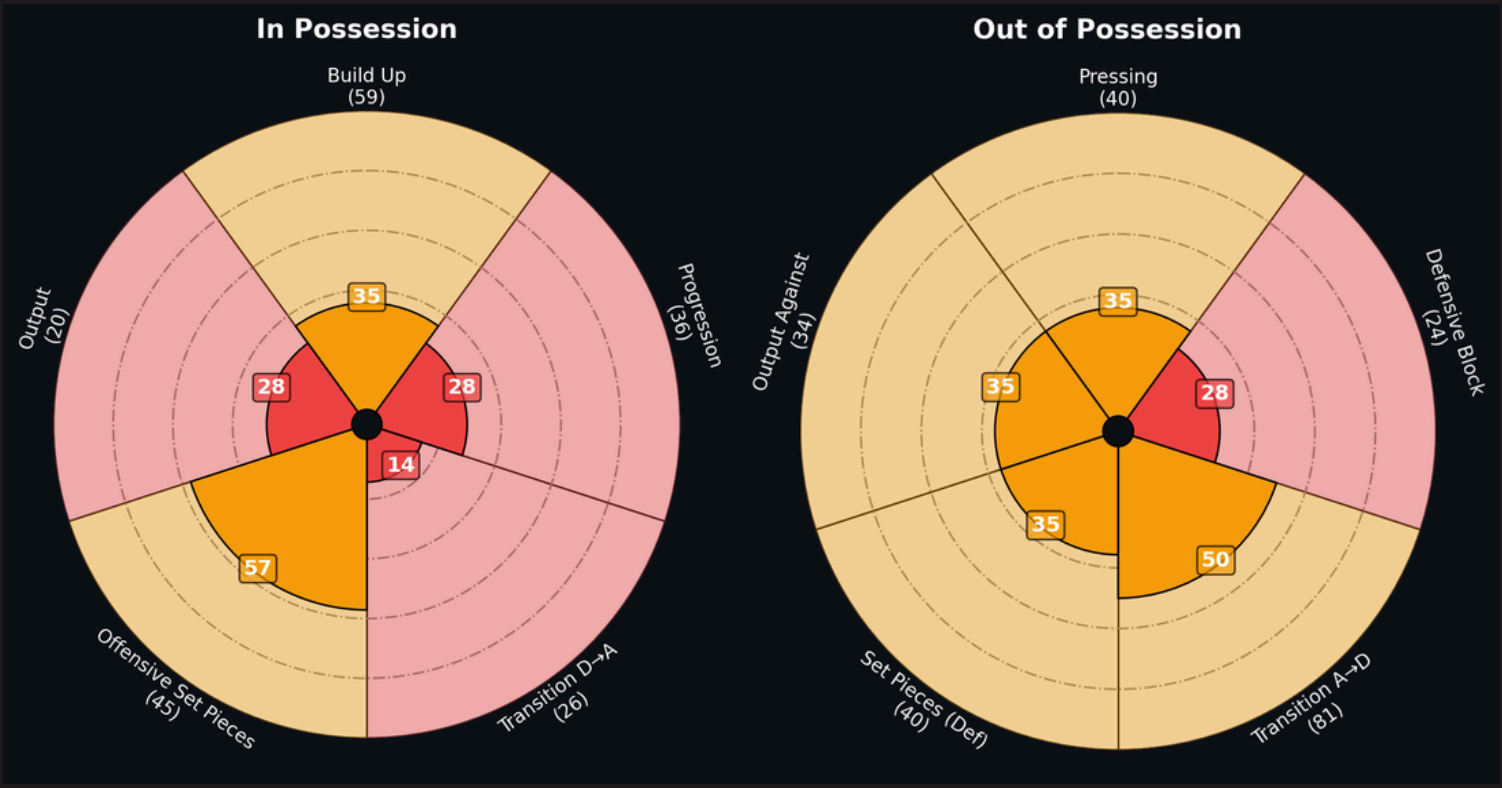
Structurally exposed; opponents regularly get into dangerous areas.

IDI — Index Defensive Intensity

How aggressively the team defends. High = high press, wins ball early. Low = passive mid/deep block, preserves shape.

Passive pressing output

UNION BERLIN TEAM PERFORMANCE BY PHASE



UNION BERLIN NEEDS VS. CANDIDATE STRENGTHS

FIT

- Transition D→A - High ITS. His counter-attacking system is built entirely around rapid transition.
- Output - Counter-attacking transitions can create genuine chances

UNFIT

- Defensive Block - Low IDO and IDI. The critical failure point. The identical weakness Union Berlin are already suffering from.
- Progression - Strong IGC and ITS, but no clear style (average IOB). His teams don't rely on intricate build-up, which means the weakness is partially bypassed

OPPORTUNITIES

- ITS 85.7 is the highest transition output in this comparison
- His balanced IOB means he won't overload a technically limited squad
- Two Frauen-Bundesliga promotions with Meppen prove he understands the pressure required in survival and promotion battles.

RISKS

- IDO 35.7 is a red zone metric — this is the most dangerous aspect of this appointment.
- The counter-attacking model demands pacey, clinical forwards.
- No solution exists in his system for the Progression weakness - high chance that red zone stays red under his management.
